Definition

There has been a major increase in children being raised by grandparents or other relatives in recent years. Examples of some factors that have contributed to this rise are increased reporting of abuse and neglect, drug abuse by parents, HIV/AIDS, and parental incarceration.

Grandparents raising children may have issues with their own health, age, finances and legal issues of guardianship.

- Nationally, 4.5 million children are living in grandparent-headed households (6.3% of all children under age 18). This represents a 30% increase from 1990 to 2000.*
- There are another 1.5 million children in the United States who are living in households headed by other relatives (2.1% of all children under 18).
- In Maryland, there are 98,836 children living in grandparent-headed households (7.3% of all children in the state). There are another 30,651 children living in households headed by other relatives (2.3% of all children in the state). Of the children living in households headed by grandparents or other relatives in Maryland 54,323 are living there without either parent present.

Why do we care?

- Children who are being raised by grandparents or other relatives are usually not with their own parents due to some unfortunate circumstance
- Children who are not in the care of their parents may show signs of stress
- Grandparents or other kinship caregivers may have mixed emotions about the responsibilities in raising a relative's child
- Grandparents who do not have formal custody of their grandchildren are not eligible for financial aid, and may be under a financial burden
- Grandparents and kinship caregivers may give the child a sense of stability and family support

What can we do about it?

See links and resources below to help:

- Educate yourself about your rights
- Get in touch with family support groups
- Become an active advocate for the child you are raising
